The resident received a call from somebody posing as a lawyer, stating their son was in jail and required bail money. After sending money once, they received a follow up call from the "lawyer" saying the charges had been increased and more bail money was required. The victim then provided more money before actually speaking to their son who was not in police custody.

Officer's note: This scam used the high pressure tactics and sense of urgency and seriousness that has led to this type of scam being successful, and therefore repeatedly used. Always do your diligence. Any time somebody is trying to urgently get you to provide money, slow the process down and do your diligence before providing any funds. If you are at all suspicious, report to police and do not provide money or personal information.

"The Field Coach" - Cpl. Ryan Eckersley

This week I thought I'd share a little story about Mountie life. Late in 2006, I was a young recruit at the RCMP's Depot Training Academy in Regina, where I received notice that I was being posted to a small town in Northwestern Alberta. I called the Detachment Commander to discuss housing options available in the small town, and learned that there was nothing for rent, and only two homes for sale in the town of 900. He sent my photos of each and I booked a weekend trip up to the community to view both and hopefully settle on a place to live.

On Friday after training I flew from Regina to Edmonton, where my fiancée and her father picked me up from the airport and we drove 5.5 hrs north to Spirit River to view the two houses. As we pulled in to the small community we were driving up the new street in town where the first house was located. I immediately noticed the neighbor across the street hanging Christmas lights on the high peak of a new 2-story home. He had a ladder from the driveway to the roof above the attached garage, then a second ladder atop the garage that went to the highest peak of the house, some 25 feet above the ground. He was at the top rung of that ladder, with only one foot on the ladder, the other leg extended out for balance one hand hanging on to an eaves trough, and the other arm fully extended, clipping Christmas lights on to the edge of the roof. I commented to my wife something to the effect of "well if we buy this house we'll have a lunatic for a neighbor". At this point the lunatic neighbor noticed us in the driveway and shouted from his precarious perch on the ladder "Hey, are you Ryan? I'm your field coach!". He sprinted down from the rooftop, ran over and introduced himself. I later learned that my field coach had previously been a home builder and was well versed in hanging off ladders at heights.

The role of a field coach in policing is a very important one. In six intense months of training at Depot you learn a lot about law and police tactics, but the field coach teaches you how to actually do the job and be safe and effective. He was a fantastic field coach, teaching me so much about policing and life in general. He was also an incredible neighbor and our wives became close friends as well, making our five years in the small community fly by. I'm proud to say that after 16 years we remain best friends. Since I called him a lunatic earlier, I won't name his name. But if you happen find yourself in High Prairie, keep an eye out for Staff Sergeant "Tazer, he's one of a kind!
